Fall and Winter Watering with Your Non-potable System

Colder weather is just around the corner bringing those below freezing Colorado nights and snow. That means it's time to winterize your sprinkler system and exterior water connection for the season. As a reminder, parts of our system remain pressurized year round so we can flush the system throughout the winter to mitigate naturally occurring build-up.

As we've noted before, our friends at the Adams County CSU Extension Office are the experts on all things agriculture and they have some great information and general tips to help you care for your trees and shrubs during the winter:

- ◆ Water trees, shrubs, lawns, and perennials during prolonged dry fall and winter periods to prevent root damage that affects the health of the entire plant, but only when air and soil temperatures are above 40 degrees F with no snow cover.
- ◆ Established large trees have a root spread equal to, or greater than, the height of the tree. Apply water to the most critical part of the root zone within the drip line

For more in depth information be sure to visit their Fall and Winter Watering page on their website at <https://bit.ly/459LNVT>. They have some great information as well as links to additional resources to help you out. And don't forget that they also offer a variety of classes and workshops on various gardening and agricultural topics.

We've had a great response from the community on our website which includes not only the link to set up payment on your account, but a lot of helpful resources and FAQs. If you have not already done so, we encourage you to visit www.ToddCreekVillage.org to get signed up for our notification system. If you haven't visited in a while, you will be prompted to register. It's quick and easy, and you are able to select which notifications you would like, and how you would like to receive them. Our notification system offers the choice of email, text message, and automated call. You can also use the convenient contact form on the site if you have a question or an idea for us.
